Part B, Questions 8, 9, 10 & 12:

In the ordinary course of business, the International Union, UAW, each year retains about 125 law firms, located in various parts of the United States. These law firms represent the UAW and its active and retired membership in a variety of legal disputes with employers and others. The UAW's expenses for legal fees for these outside firms are reported on the UAW's LM-2, and related filings, and ordinarily exceed $3 million annually, in the aggregate. Each individual firm receives only a small portion of that amount, with the actual amount paid for each firm varying considerably from year to year depending on the extent and nature of the work performed by the firm.

My daughter, Emma B. Whitman, age 20, worked from mid-May to mid-August, 2003, as a Junior Law Clerk for one of these firms, listed the answer to Question #8. She received total W-2 wages of $4,910.40 for this work. She then returned to college.

This filing is made, assuming arguendo, but without admitting, that a 20-year-old daughter is a "minor child" for purposes of Title II of the LMRDA. A written request for a ruling on this issue was submitted to the OLMS, for the Secretary, but has remained unanswered for some 6 months.
